Varsity Editors, Staff Resign

Protest Publication Ban By Student Council

Toronto, CUP.—The editor and staff of the Toronto Varsity resigned on March 6 in protest when the Publications Commission of the Students' Administrative Council suspended all further issues pending consideration by a full council meeting today. The commission felt that the editor showed irresponsibility by publishing the humor issue on March 5. Varsity's masthead felt that this was in effect a motion of want of confidence and resigned. Most students questioned comment favourably on the issue.

One of the main front-page stories was headed "Remedial Sex Compulsory-SAC Finances Field Work." This was a take-off on President Sidney Smith's recent report, wherein he urged that a course in remedial English should be compulsory for all first year General Course students. His report said that students admitted to the University were not equipped by nature and prepared by schooling for advanced study.

The take-off said the "Department of Sex" recently gave an examination to students who had elected "Social Relations" as one of their subjects. The "failure" rate was 60%, and this "alarming fact" brought on the suggestion for the "new course."

'Student Memorial' Television Station At Toronto Varsity

Toronto, CUP.—Plans for the immediate construction of a memorial student television station were announced by the Board of Governors at Toronto recently, stated an article in the humor issue of the Varsity. "Previously the administration had clearly expressed its disapproval of Memorial Student Union. Plans for the building include a coffee bar which will serve hot water spiked with lemon juice. A music room will be included for rainy days, and it is rumored that a co-educational pogo court is being considered."

"Each student is to be issued a small colored television set in the fall for a nominal fee and will then be set loose in the forests for the following six months. Lectures will be viewed on the television screens while lolling on the lawns."

'Springsong' Concert Scheduled March 22

Saturday, March 22nd will mark the presentation of "Springsong," the McGill Choral Society's second concert this season. The programme will commence at 8.30 p.m. in the Currie Gymnasium.

The choral programme will feature Bruch's cantata "Fair Ellen" (Schoen Ellen). Bruch composed music in all idioms, displaying a mastery of a wide variety of style. His melody takes its stand on folk-song and in this cantata he uses the well-known "Campbells are Coming" as the theme for much of the dramatic content. The solo roles of Ellen and Edward will be sung by Audrey Crowell, soprano, and Fadlow Shehadi, baritone, students of music at McGill. Also on the programme will be the chorus entitled "The Heavens are Telling" from Haydn's Oratorio, "The Creation."

ASUS to Hold Open Meeting This Afternoon

An Arts and Science open meeting will take place today at 1 p.m. in the Union Ballroom. The purpose of the meeting is to amend the constitution of the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society, so that a woman may be president of the Society. All members of the Faculty of Arts and Science are urged to attend the meeting so that the Quorum may be filled and a vote taken. The executive for 1952-53 will be introduced at this meeting. The constitution demands that two open meetings be held each year. Tomorrow's meeting will be this year's second.

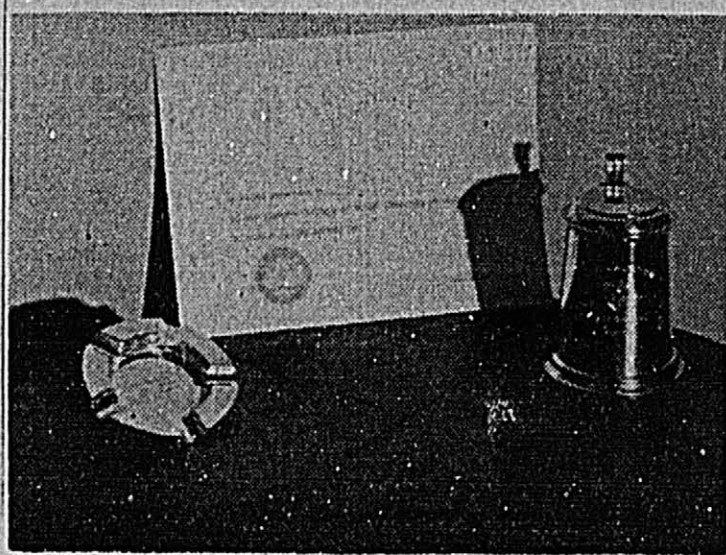

The part of the constitution to be amended is Article V, Section A, Paragraph one which now reads: "President (male), nominated in his third year to hold office in his fourth year." This is to be changed to: "President, nominated in his (her) third year to hold office in his (her) fourth year."

Arts and Science Undergraduate Society Banquet will be held Thursday at 6.00 p.m. sharp in the grill room of the Union. Awards will be presented to those who have distinguished themselves in the activities of the Society.

Vaughan Williams "Linden Lea", Lecuona's "Malaguena" and "Non Nobis Domine" and R. Quilter's setting of a Kipling poem are other selections to be sung. The society will welcome Marie Josch, harpist, and Mario Duchesne, flutist, as guest artists. M. Duchesne has studied at the Geneva Conservatory of Music and under Andre Pepin, famous European musician. His programme will include among others a 17th century work for recorder and harp. Miss Josch studied at the Provincial Conservatory and is presently harpist of Les Concerts Symphoniques de Montreal. She will play selections alone, and together with M. Duchesne will perform Purcell's "Sonata for flute and harp in D minor."

Mr. Gifford Mitchell will again direct the 175 voice choir accompanied by Doris Killam, well-known Montreal pianist.

Tickets, at a cost of 75 cents, for "Springsong" may be obtained from any member of the group, at the Graduate Society, or the Union Tuck Shop. Tickets will also be on sale between the hours of 11 and 3, March 19, 20 and 21, in the Union and the Arts and Medical Buildings.

A. & S. Debating Finals Today at 1

The final debate for the Arts and Science Cup will be held at 1 p.m. today in the New Union Clubroom, culminating the long series of debating eliminations.

Topic of the debate is "Resolved that the Voting Age in Canada be Lowered to 18." Two second-year debaters, Isadore Yablon and Ben Greenburg, will be upholding the affirmative. The negative side will be taken by Eric de Bellagie and Pat Vos from Third Year.

The Third Year team defeated Jim Ross and Lionel Lustgarten yesterday in the semifinal of the Arts and Science contest. The winners argued that censorship should not be abolished. They pointed out that in time of national emergency censorship is necessary to keep up the nation's morale. Crime movies tend to influence the minds of the young and uninformed in our society.

But Not Suspension

Any newspaper thrives on continuity and regularity. Especially to a daily newspaper is this important and when the routine is interrupted, it is difficult to recommence. But nothing weakens a paper more than an arbitrary suspension. This is what happened at the University of Toronto.

There the Publications Committee of the Students' Administrative Council suspended The Varsity after it had published a humour edition. Most of the stories were clever satires on the Students' Administrative Council, with no attempt to conceal the identity of those being caricatured. A take-off on the proposed "Remedial English" course entitled "Remedial Sex" was also printed. Only this last story could really be called offensive. However, it is not our purpose to discuss the details of the edition itself but the action of the student officials.

There can be no doubt that the SAC or its Publications Committee has the right at any time, to suspend, cancel, or eliminate The Varsity. As the governing body and controller of finances, the last word certainly remains with the Council. But what can, and should, be questioned is the advisability of this move. Suspension of the newspaper was the severest action that could have been taken, even more so than suspending or replacing the editor.

On a university campus, the single newspaper is the only source of information. By suspending the paper, the committee shut off from the students, in whose interests they were acting, all official developments during the suspension. In so doing, the committee has kept both sides of the argument from being presented to the student body at large, before the final action is taken by the SAC sometime today. The editor of the campus newspaper is as much a representative of the student body as the council, so airing of the issue in public would be only democratic.

The Varsity this year has been named the best college newspaper in Canada and has even been called too adult.

Surely a compromise could have been worked out whereby The Varsity would have continued publication pending a full investigation.

Altogether too much is said nowadays that the last bastion of the free press is at the universities.

Strong measures must many times be taken against a newspaper for violating certain responsibilities placed in the hands of the editor, but a little more thought to the necessity for continuity of the Institution would eliminate such incidents as the Toronto one.

Time Out for Laughs

Probably the most significant fact to arise this year, to the close observer of the student scene, has been the growing tendency of the students to take themselves too seriously. Referring, of course, only to student activities and not to academic work. And the responsibility for the characteristic is not solely upon the students.

All in all, those outside the university have refused to recognize that university students are no longer children and that a few harmless pranks does not mean that the college student is forgetting the reason he came to a university. On the contrary it would be a sign of the beginning of a well-rounded product. We are not suggesting the return of those relics of the past hazing and other childish activities. They are gone and good riddance.

We are speaking of intelligent humour, handled intelligently, where the thought of physical violence is not considered funny. At McGill we have had a notable example recently of the effect of this reparation of humour.

For the Model Parliament, which was cancelled due to the death of the King, a group of students intended to impersonate Rep. Timothy Sheehan of "Let's Annex Canada" fame. The group went about in secrecy was convinced that the hoax would not be detected. However, the night before the Parliament these students called off their enterprise, not because they were afraid that the joke would not go over, but because they feared that Mr. Sheehan would sue them for libel and misrepresentation.

The Varsity at Toronto publishes a humour column which is made up of contributions from the student body at large. So poor was the response this year, both in numbers and quality, that for long periods of time the column has been discontinued or filled with reprints from the past.

A large number of those who recognize the problem have asked where is the so-called irrepressible humour of youth? The college student is not a finished product. Even once he has received his degree he is not shined and polished and ready to use. A college education is a preparation for life and a sense of humour is indispensable for any life. It should not, then, be repressed in the preparation.

Student Forum

Too Many Students

The other day in class, Dr. Angus Sinclair, the visiting professor of philosophy from Scotland, made a remark that I think is well for all university students to consider. He said that a university could function quite well without any students at all!

He was seeking to differentiate between a university and a high school. A university, in previous times, was a group of professors engaged in pursuing their particular academic endeavor. It was a privilege to be accepted as a student. The professors benefited by conducting lectures, which served as a secondary source of their own education, and the fees paid by the students provided necessary financial assistance. The professors' lectures were mainly designed to assist the student in his pursuit of knowledge, not to teach the student the particular subject. The modern technical schools may be considered an exception. It was correctly assumed that any student who went to the trouble of going to a university was sufficiently interested to do the necessary elementary reading, etc., on his own and it wasn't necessary to compel him to do it. It really must have been quite a pleasure, both from the professors' viewpoint as well as the students', to have been associated with a university.

On the other hand, a high school is a place where the students are taught—where the readings and lessons are assigned and strictly scrutinized. The business of the teacher is solely that of instruction and when her hours of cajoling co-operation are over she is through except for the drudgery of marking test papers.

The difference between the two are, I think, very apparent. It is also too apparent which of the two modern universities most closely resemble. Such a situation necessarily places burdens on both the faculty and the students. The majority of the loss is, however, suffered by the students. The burden of attendance checking and examinations are an example of the penalty paid because we aren't mature enough to dispense with them. The most valuable loss is the veritable gold mine of knowledge that can be had from fellow students were we all genuinely interested in our particular undertaking.

At this point I may sound as though I am suggesting that a considerable portion of the student body has no business in a university. Let I be misunderstood, that is exactly what I mean to say! What then—A plain ole everyday job—just like grand-dad perhaps had! Believe me, you won't change into another species by physical exertion—and you might well be a lot happier!

Unfortunately our modern society is not prepared to use its collective reason to arrive at such a conclusion. It would rather send its children through either the most tortuous years of their lives or permit them to waste these years in a grand conglomeration of nothing! In the process, the few real university students are forced to plod along at a not too inspiring average pace.

Fortunately, society will, I feel, eventually realize what a horrible world this would be if everyone were an "intellectual." When this time comes universities may once more be used solely by genuine students. Until such time, I think each of us would be doing our selves, as well as the rest of the world, a favor by considering our individual eligibility and then taking the proper step.

As Others See It

Alphabeticalesse

It is generally agreed that the world is becoming a very complicated place. What with NATO and UNESCO, with FAO and OEEC, with EPU and UNICEF, the average citizen is all in a maze. He observes that his leaders, like Providence, move in a mysterious way their wonders to perform; and at times suspects that their increasing mystery of movement is intended to conceal their diminishing performance of wonders.

The young have no such qualms. They take to the Brave New World like ducks to water, like delegates to expense accounts; coining their own brave new words as they go along, developing their own variety of what might be called Internationalesse. Thus, we are informed by a recent issue of Varsity:

On October 30, 10,000 cheered; on February 6, a University mourned. British monarchy provided the McGill campus with the two most memorable dates of the 1951-52 academic year.

In a year in which there was no freshman hazing, no frosh trial, no Winter Carnival, no campus queen — and "No Activities Week" — two occasions one the most colourful; the other the most solemn — look on all the more importance in the over-all picture of a college year in review.

Royal Couple Cheered

The colour and pageantry; the cheering thousands lining McGill's roadways on the occasion of the visit of their Royal Highnesses the Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh to the campus will go down as one of the most colourful moments in the long history of the University. The Royal Couple, whose simple and unaffected manner had already endeared them to millions, left a lasting favorable impression on friends, graduates, staff and student body of the University.

Long Live The Queen

Four months later, when the Princess who had visited the campus was hailed the world over as Queen, the University joined loyal subjects everywhere in mourning the death of a beloved Monarch. For a week the flag atop the Arts Building fluttered limply at half-staff. The Carnival, Model Parliament; all intercollegiate sports; all major extracurricular activity was cancelled out of respect to the memory of a long-ailing Sovereign. On the day of the Royal funeral the University united in a simple service of tribute.

The year had its share of burning questions, glittering formalities, lively debates, speeches, dances, poorly attended meetings, and other reflections from varied other facets of extracurricular campus life. Then, too, the year had its innovations — possible precedent-setters for sessions to come.

Studies Emphasized

"No Activities Week" saw the Billiard Room and The Daily shut down; the Library reading room a little more crowded. A new ruling by University authorities brought Freshman to an extra week of classes. Hazing was eliminated; reception cut from two weeks to three days. A further attempt to put more emphasis on study came in the second term when The Daily was cut down from five to four issues a week. And residence officials gave notice that they intended to enforce regulations designed to bring about a stoppage of necking on the front steps of R.V.C.

Traditions were carried on through yet another season: formal stole the social limelight; the Junior Prom; Plumbers' Ball; Dental and Medical Formals. A semi-formal was staged in the Union Ballroom New Year's Eve. West Indian students brought colourful calypso renditions to the campus in their two-night "Tropicana" production.

Dramatics

The year had its campus dramatics: the English Department's "Ah Wilderness" and "Twelfth Night"; the Players' Club's "Candida" and "Children's Hour." And "Still Happy" was the little, mountaineers and TV the theme, of the 1952 edition of the Red and White Review.

SCOPE, the SEC's new Cultural Committee, brought to McGill conductor Sir Thomas Beecham, architect Bruce Goff, ballerina Cella Franca, poet Dylan Thomas; Model Parliaments spotlighted M. J. Goldwell, Tim Buck and J. T. Hackett, Q.C.

Controversies

Russian student exchange became the question of the year. Possible compulsory subscription to the Annual caused its share of controversy as the term drew to a close. The question of McGill's freshman mushroomed from a campus survey to a topic in national newspapers and in international magazines. The results of a Daily survey on cheating spread far beyond the confines of the campus. While the question of the Arts Building doorway still remained officially unsettled.

Student politics went on as ever: candidates; acclamations; balloting; the student officers for a new academic year.

The Climax: Exams

As the middle of March rolled around, with awards banquets and final club meetings, all that was left was the final exams to bring to a close another academic year.

SCOPE Recital

SCOPE, the Cultural Committee of the SEC, will present a piano recital by Mieczyslaw Horszowski as one of its final programs in the school year. This event will take place on Friday, March 21, in Moyse Hall, and will be free for students and members of the staff.

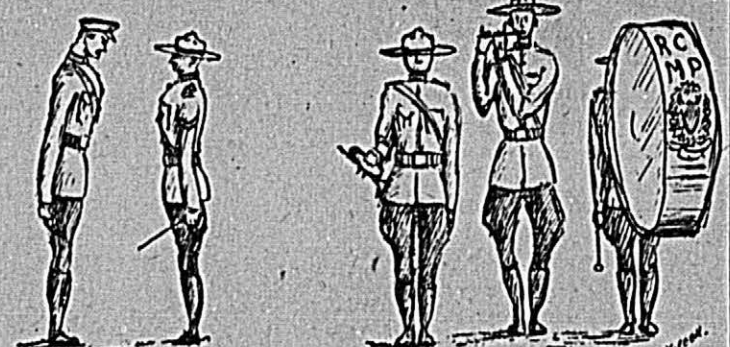

The varied program to be offered by Horszowski will consist of Haydn's Andante and Variations, four sonatas by Scarlatti, the Waldstein Sonata Opus 53 by Beethoven, four impromptus Opus 90 by Schubert, three Etudes and a Scherzo by Chopin, and some Debussy.

Horszowski is noted for his mastery of technique and musicality.

TONIGHT AWARDS BANQUET

Dave Caldwell Named Stuart Forbes Trophy Winner

Robertson Voted Bell Puck Trophy

By ART GUTTMAN

A rugged rearguard who hails from the West has upheld the honor of the plains. Ron Robertson, one of the steady players with Rocky Robillard's hockey Redmen has been awarded the Dr. Bobby Bell Trophy, as the man most valuable to the team.

The cup, originally donated by the Dental Grads in honor of the former dentist and McGill hockey coach, has been won by a Regina-born player every year in its short three season history. Charlie Sanderson, also a defenceman was the initial holder of the trophy, while starry Gordie Knutson took the

Griffin Overtakes Merling in Scoring

By MARCEL BALTZAN

McGill's last chance for even the least bit of glory in the current basketball season faded last night when Queen's phenomenal scoring artist Don Griffin edged past Sheldon Merling to win the league scoring championship. Griffin captured the championship with a 26 point effort as his crew went down to a 62-52 defeat at the hands of Western. The win, incidentally, gave the Mustangs their seventh straight intercollegiate basketball championship.

Merling, who finished out his schedule last weekend, had a nine point bulge over the Queen's player with a total of 120 points in his eight league games. Griffin had 111 in his seven league games up to the Western contest and then passed him with that Herculean effort.

Athletic Honour Caps Football, Cage Career

By FRED LOWY

Dave Caldwell, court and gridiron star from Manchester, Conn., has been named this year's winner of the Major Stuart Forbes Trophy. The award, presented annually to the athlete who best combines athletic ability and sportsmanship, is the highest form of sports recognition at McGill. In winning the cup, Caldwell follows in the footsteps of such Red and White stalwarts as Pete Robinson, Rocky Robillard, and Adin Merrow.

SCHOOL DAYS NUMBERED

A virtual powerhouse in both the fall and winter pastimes, Dave's remaining days at the school, however, are numbered. When, on May 28, some 1500 solemn-faced students receive their diplomas, the tall, well-built, young man from

DAVE CALDWELL

New England with light brown hair and the distinctly athletic appearance will be among them.

When, at convocation, Dr. David M. Caldwell returns to his seat, sheepskin in hand, McGill will have lost one of its finest students, a peerless leader both on the athletic field and in the classroom.

RESPECTED BY ALL

In his four years at McGill, Caldwell, the leader, the athlete, the scholar, and the gentleman has won for himself such respect from friends, teammates and coaches as is accorded few men.

Never a record-shattering, athletic superman, though a far better than average basketball and football player, Caldwell is a natural leader of men, a striking figure admired and esteemed by both teammates and opponents.

In his three years as first-string end on the football squad and guard in the cage sport, Caldwell has been a steady workman and a great inspirational force. His only regret on leaving McGill is that he has not been on any intercollegiate title-winning team. The only championship he has helped to rack up for Red and White is the Montreal Basketball League crown which the Redmen annexed last spring.

HAILS FROM CONNECTICUT

The new trophy winner was born and still resides in Manchester, Conn., a town of 2,500 inhabitants, about ten miles out of Hartford. He developed an early liking for sports and played a lot of football, basketball and baseball. Later, at Loomis High School in nearby Windsor, Conn., he starred in those three sports.

On graduating from Loomis in 1942, Dave enrolled at Amherst

Calendar Capers On Tap for Saturday

By RHODA HARRIS

The McGill Memorial Swimming pool will be the scene of a synchronized swimming show, entitled "Calendar Capers," on Saturday March 15 at 8:30 p.m. This show is sponsored by the Women Student's Athletic Association and is an all student production.

It is McGill's first water show and will include such routines as comedy diving performed by Adin Merrow, backstroke champion, synchronized swimming, and a diving exhibition by Leo Vigeant, Canadian Diving Champion and Canada's representative at the New Zealand games.

The show boasts such names as Irwin Kopin, Audrey Wipper and Shirley Holden of intercollegiate fame; Ruth Powell and Joan Corner, intercollegiate synchronized swimming champions.

Tickets will be on sale in the Physical Education office at R.V.C. from 9-5 and in the Arts, Union and Physical Science Buildings on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. They may also be obtained at the door on the night of the performance.

Carmen Bradley, free-style sensation of the swimming team, planned the show as well as being one of its participants. The lighting is being handled by Tudor Johnston, a 4th year student in engineering.

Cleugh, Mathews Cop Coed Titles

By RHODA HARRIS

Two women athletes will be officially recognized for their outstanding contribution to coed sports at McGill, when they will be presented with the highest awards of the McGill Women's Student Athletic Council at the annual banquet on Wednesday, March 26 at 6:30 p.m. in R.V.C. At that time Wendy Cleugh and Bliss Mathews, both fourth year Physical Education students will be recipients of the trophy donated by the Women's Athletic Board for "proficiency in leadership and athletics."

Won last year by Roberta Tyler, the trophy consists of a rose bowl on a wooden base, and is awarded only to graduating students upon the fulfillment of certain conditions. Each winner must have received 4 senior M's for participating in 4 intercollegiate squads throughout their college career. In addition, a position on the MWSAA Council, either in the capacity of a member of the executive or as a club manager, and active membership in another club other than the one for which she received her senior M's are necessary requirements.

Wendy and Bliss have been consistently active on the sport scene ever since their freshman year at McGill and have also maintained a high level of scholastic standing.

Captain of this year's intercollegiate basketball team, and a member of the squad for the past four years, Wendy represented the hoop club on the Athletic Council last year. She has been one of the top scorers in intercollegiate basketball ever since she first began competing under the Red and White banner. Wendy's other activities include the Intramural Sports Committee, and field hockey.

The other award winner, Bliss Mathews is currently intercollegiate diving champion, and has swam and played badminton alternately each year in intercollegiate competition. Two years ago she topped her class in the Ski School course in the Laurentians.

to spearhead McGill's best basketball squad in many years. As captain of the Redmen, he was the sparkplug of the team which won the MBL basketball crown and the Dods Trophy.

An inspirational factor all season, Dave rose to his greatest heights in the city championship game against the YMHA Blues. Checking Ben Lands, YMHA's veteran star into the ground, Caldwell, together with Lou Endman and Sol Tolchinsky led his team to a dramatic overtime victory over the vaunted Blues.

 That season Dave won the Duquet Trophy for the Most Valuable Player in the MBL and was named to both the city and intercollegiate all-stars teams.

FOOTBALL CAPTAIN

Last fall, following the example of the basketballers, Dave's teammates on the football squad elected him captain. Once more he went through the season, never basking in the limelight but methodically going about his duties. His selection, this spring, as winner of the Forbes Trophy is a fitting climax to a fruitful and successful athletic career.

Dave Caldwell graduates this spring with a degree in medicine. However, he leaves with more than that. The handsome athlete who has earned the respect of all who have come in contact with him will take as well, the best wishes for the future of professors, coaches and students. If past performances are any indication, the Dave Caldwell story should read "success story."

Applications Due For ISS Seminar

Completed application forms for the fifth International Student Service (ISS) seminar to be held in India this summer must be returned to the students council in Union by Friday, March 14, the ISS committee announced yesterday. Three scholarships to the seminar will be awarded McGill students.

Candidates for the scholarships will be interviewed by the selection committee on Saturday and during the following week, the announcement said. Applications for the seminar have been unusually heavy this year.

Application forms are still available at the students' council office. Both undergraduate and graduate students are eligible. Selections will be made on the basis of academic records, and personal and leadership qualities.
